Two Runs Lost by. Giants Through Visitation of Hard Luck.

CUBS ARE VICTORS AGAIN

One Run Ahead Once More-Errors One Cause of Defeat.

The Giants came back closer to the nine games. The Giants were the only home team to lose. The Brooklyns made it three straight from the sliding Reds, and the Phillies took the third in succession from the Pirates. What would have happened in Boston was kept a secret by rain.

The Cubs outbatted, outfielded and defeated the Giants yesterday, being the third successive time these marauders from the inland seas have stepped out on the Polo Grounds and brought a heart pang to the Glants and their followers. The score was 4 to 3, the Cubs winning by a one run margin for the third time in succession. Harking back to the last Chicago series the reckoning is six Chicago series the reckoning is six straight victories for the Cubs. They are making the Giants wince while they may, putting up a strong and hard to beat game while the galled jade business is Yet outbatted and outfielded though the Giants were, they wouldn't have been outscored but for plain hard luck. That plea can be set forth without any apologies. But for the veriest fluke the Giants plea can be set forth without any apologies. But for the veriest fluke the Giants would have won the game, notwithstanding there were recurring bad plays on their part which gave runs to the Cubs.

The finicky visitation of ill fortune took place in the sixth inning. There were men on second and third with one out, and Herzog at the bat when the thing happened. Herzog drilled a hard, clean single along the ground to the right of the box and to right centre. Becker and Merkle, who were on the bases, ran home and the drive was good enough to put Herzog on second base. But as the ball went humming through the infield it grazed Umpire Bush on the leg. He tried to get out of the way, but wasn't nimble enough.

There was nothing to do under the rule but to send the runners back to their bases and send Herzog back to first. The tough part of it was that it wasn't a hit that a Chicago fielder could hav stopped if Bush hadn't been in the way It just flicked Bush as it was going by and Evers, who was nearest to it, hadn a chance to head it off, although as a header off he is no slouch. The rule worked distinctly to the disadvantage of the New Yorks. Instead of two runs in. worked distinctly to the disadvantage of the New Yorks. Instead of two runs in. a man on second and one out, as would have been the case but for the blight from fortune, there were three on bases. I hour and 24 minutes.

No runs ever got in—not in that inning. Meyers spilled a grounder to Tinker for a double play, and the inning was over. This double play was one of two which the Cubs made use of to choke off the Giants when the latter were on the way to runs. Other cogent reasons for the home team's defeat were weak hitting against Richie, weaker hitting against Ruelbach, who for the third time came forward in the nick of time time came forward in the nick of time and quelled an uprising; two battery errors, a poor throw by Herzog when a man was running home, a missed ground ball by Murray and a couple of timely hits by Zimmerman. One battery error was a hit batsman, the other a passed ball by Meyers when a runner, who af-terward scood, was stealing. Only one run off Tesreau was due to clean hitting. The carned run off Tesreau came in the first inning. There were two when Tin-ker dusted the right foul line with a two bagger. Zimmerman brought him through with a rap to centre. The Giants had better chances to score in their half. Devore singled. Richie was wild and sent Doyle and Becker down on balls. It looked fine for a runfest, but Richie found the plate and Merkle flounced a grounder. to Evers for a double play. Devore scor-ing. Murray's fly to Sheckard closed the inning, one which ended very tamely con-

ing. Murray's fly to Sheckard closed the inning, one which ended very tamely considering its promise.

Both sides were passive from the first inning to the eighth, except that the Cubs scored in the third and the Glants sloughed off chances in the fifth and sixth. After Murray had made a pretty running catch off Sheckard in the third Schulte was hit. Tinker retired on a high fly to Doyle. That brought the dynamic Zimmerman up again and he flattened out the bell on a line to left. Devore's relay to Herzog was made in plenty of time to beat Schulte to the plate, but Herzog threw the ball plump into Schulte's sinewy back. The latter did not pause to reason why, but rolled over the tylpate.

A base on balls to Meyers and missed Fletcher on the bases in the fifth with nobody out. Tesreau tried to sacrifice and repped to Saier. With two strikes and instead of walking flied to Sheckard. Poyle flied to Schulte. Richje hit Becker in the sixth and Merkle made an inited hit. They advanced on Murray's sacrifice and that was the situation when Herzog bashed to Bush.

it. They advanced on Murray's sacrifice and that was the situation when Herzog bashed to Bush.

McCornick batted for Tesreau in the seventh and that brought Ames into the same. Ames walked leach in the eighth after Fletcher had thrown out Zimmerman. Tommy tarried to address a few caustic remarks to the umpire. A freeful brood, these Cubs, much given to wry grumacing and querulous talk, taking the bad breaks with ill grace and not shy of signs of self-sesteem. Mey res dropped the pitched ball as Leach projected a steal and didn't throw at all. Saler hit with tremendous force to right, Murray went down to one knee to head off the ball and it went through him. Erso, Saler followed Leach over the plate. As Evers singled, Leach would have scored anyway, but it is doubtful whether Saier would have.

The Giants also made two runs in the eighth, largely through the ascension of Richle. Doyle and Becker were passed and when Merike spanked a single to left Doyle tallied and Becker went to third. There was a jawing powwow among the Cubs and much scolding of Richie. The game was held up until Reulbach could answer the distress signals of Chance, and when Murray filed to Schulte, Becker came in from third. He was the first out, but then the deadly force whith force habit, which has fastened on to them like a lichen to a log, fungsed the Giants. Herzog forced Merkle and Meyers forced Herzog. Herzog looked safe all over, but Bush adjudicated that Zimmerman's throw to Evers had beaten him. The decisions agreed so heartily with the views of several of the Giants that they merrily hurled their caps in the air.

The pinch hit plans of the Giants in the ninth went for agley. With Fletcher out, Snodgrass batted for Ames and was The Giants came back closer to the a picnic for Reulbach's speed and concuss yesterday, that team again nosing trol. Leach bit at an old ruse. On Evers's steal Meyers made a bluff throw to second and Tommy started in from third. Meyers thereupon threw him out. of a retrograde movement on the part of Messrs. Tinker and Evers in this series. In fact they never were better.

The New York American League Club has released Jack Quinn, the pitcher, to the Rochester club. Quinn has been with the Highlanders several seasons and done much good work for them, but this year he did not come up to espectations, although it looked in the spring as if he would have a good successful season.

made a wide throw off Bates, after Marsans had flied out, but again Hummel's long reach prevented an error and run that would have tied the score.

The Reds made nine hits off Rucker, four of them by Egan, and eight men were left on bases. Humphries also pitched well at critical points, as nine Dodgers were anchored to the bags. Sharp fielding by Esmond, Egan and Bates materially aided the Reds' pitcher, while for Brooklyn, Cutshaw and Fisher, between them, accepted seventeen out of eighteen chances, the only error of the game being a poor throw by Fisher on a slow groundersthat Egan beat out.

The Brooklyns won on the cleanest kind of batting. They bunched four of their eleven hits in the fourth inning. Smith started it with a single to left and Wheat put him on third with a double to right. Cutshaw popped to Hoblitzell, but Humphries then tightened up, fanning Miller, and Rucker filed to Egan.
